

Passport Feature Now Available For Free to All Tinder Members

Members Can Check In and Connect with People From Barcelona to Baton Rouge, Manhattan to Manchester

April 2nd, All Around the World - In this crazy time, people are feeling a potent mix of anxious and lonely. The combo of self isolation and business closures means we're missing out on the everyday exchanges that make us human, from sharing a smile on the train to work to the chance of hanging together in the evening. Even though we're socially distant, Tinder members haven't disconnected, there were more swipes on Sunday March 29th than on any single day in the history of Tinder (3+ billion swipes).

Tinder members around the world have stepped up for each other in amazing ways. It's like the digital version of Italians leaning out their balconies to sing together. As parts of the world went into quarantine, members began Passporting into those countries.

"I'm happy we've been able to make our Passport feature, which allows you to connect with anyone, anywhere in the world, available for free to all members," said Elie Seidman, Tinder CEO. "We hope our members, many of whom are anxious and looking for more human connection, can use Passport to transport themselves out of self-quarantine or isolation to anywhere in the world. We're inspired by how people are using Tinder to be there for each other, and we want to fan these flames of social solidarity."

What's New On Tinder In The Past Few Weeks:

Globally more members are swiping right on someone new, having more conversations overall, and those conversations are lasting longer. People are reaching out to ask 'Are you okay?' instead of starting with a 🍌.

- Daily conversations have been up an average of 20% around the world; and the average length of the conversations is 25% longer.
  - In Australia , conversations have been up an average of 16% and the average length of conversations is 12% longer. Stay home, be safe, social distancing, "how are you", wash your hands and face emojis are seen increasingly being used in bios.
- And yes, EVERYONE is talking about toilet paper, at least in their bios.
